Adopting a name from theatrical history, Cloak and Dagger was formed in the spring of 1964 to afford students the opportunity to participate in all phases of play production and to provide a regular program of significant plays for the entertainment of the college community.

Membership in Cloak and Dagger leads to election to Alpha Psi Omega, the national honor fraternity for the university and college theatre, the largest recognized society in any departmental field.

This year's Dome has displayed the qualities of an outstanding college newspaper. The only link between present and past is in name. Noel Koch and Co. have produced an excellent bi-weekly newspaper second to none in content. With frank, interesting and sometimes controversial articles, the Dome has captured the leading interests of the entire student body. Plaudits are well deserved by the entire staff for their untiring and diligent efforts.
