

*"A Savage Race that hoard, and sleep, and feed, and know not me . . .
We are not that strength which in old days moved earth and heaven . . .
To strive, To seek, To find, and not to yield."*

Ulysses, Alfred Lord Tennyson

Perhaps everything is not as this yearbook shows and yet most of the photographs were taken on our campus. For PMC is a child of its students and it can only be as good as its parents. However, it has a right to exist and to be good.

Perhaps it is only that we are too much in the forest to notice the beauty of the trees. If we could look as Emerson did when he said, "I have loved the stars too deeply to be fearful of the night."

The 1968 Sabre & Scroll is the effort of a few individuals. Perhaps this will be a reason for criticism of the Book. Nevertheless, this Book was produced as a stimulus to PMC Colleges not as a pictorial review. The effort was one of devotion to a dream and concern for a college. To the many persons who gave up or offered their gracious apathy, I'm sorry. You missed an interesting and rewarding experience. To the persons who offered their opposition, I thank you. You've made success all the sweeter. This Book is now and will remain an example of what is possible on our campus when pride exceeds apathy.

Because of the nature of the effort necessary the professional organizations associated with this Yearbook have contributed far more than is normal or required on a college annual. I cannot stress enough that without Dan Solari of Cooke Publishing and Mark Dante of Glick Studios this Book would not have been successful nor might it ever been published.

Beyond providing the necessary professional critique and service these two men and their companies became involved and concerned far beyond their commitment. When circumstances became frustrating they provided the excitement and stimulus to look beyond the temporary defeat. The problems and constant maneuvering were always met with a smile and as challenges not as tasks. I learned a great deal from Dan and Mark not only about yearbooks but about dedication and pride in one's work.

To next year's Sabre & Scroll Staff, I hope you can combine an involved staff with these fine men. Then this volume will only be a beginning and be surpassed quickly.

My personal appreciation to President Moll, Col. Schaubel, Mrs. Swetz, Bob Arvay, Arnold Brod, Rick Rhodes, and Susan. They also cared.

Many hours of time and effort go into producing a successful yearbook, but without the help of friends and patrons the finished product would never be realized. Their financial help is greatly needed and appreciated.

The yearbook staff would like to thank all those Friends and Patrons of PMC Colleges for their help in producing this year's Sabre & Scroll.
