is throwing Dry popcorn balls of Summer wild happiness Through the upthrust limbs of birches swaying above me.

Light a fire and smell its brightness Warming up

The whole world

Inside of you

As it swirls around
In a whirlpool of exuberance

That sprizzles sky worlds

In an exploding rush of wonderment!

You can feel the life

Pulsating among The streams and paths of the forest and the people among you, and it's good to be with Wonder people again

And it's good to be alive.

I am falling, dropping swiftly, floating, stopping. rolling over on the loose and unattached and feeling like a canceled six-cent postage stamp that came unglued. The violet yellow raincoat flowers in the field that I met yesterday are dead and limp and brown. The grass that yesterday inhaled the lively wind lays fallen and exhausted on the hardened ground that once was so receptive to my naked feet when I ran freely.
 Now the ripened day is fading on the edge of my horizons distant.
 Swiftly comes the darkness.
