On November 30, an announcement of a press conference stirred up the curiosity of the student body. Rumors spread through Adams like an epidemic. Is the basketball team being awarded? Is Mr. Przybysz leaving? But to everyone's surprise, Ms. Cwidak, English teacher and Department Head, was named Teacher of the Year for the state of Indiana.

After receiving the honor of Teacher of the Year for South Bend, Ms. Cwidak was entered in the state competition. This was a lot of hard work, according to Ms. Cwidak.

The Teacher of the Year is chosen by a committee which bases its decision on teacher's portfolios. This is where the hard work comes in. Ms. Cwidak wrote a biography, along with her philosophies of education. She also collected many letters of recommendation and gave examples of her teaching technique. All this was collected in her portfolio.

When examining her portfolio, the committee looked for several things. They looked for inspirational teaching, and the treatment of students as individuals. The amount of time spent on improving teaching was also taken into consideration. They looked for innovative practices in teaching and whether she kept abreast of current educational theories.

After receiving the prestigious award, Ms. Cwidak spoke at a Farm Bureau Convention in Indianapolis. In January she will go back to Indianapolis to speak to the state legislature and will attend an awards presentation. Finally, in April, she will enter the national competition.

When asked whether the award gave her incentive in teaching, she replied, "The incentive is what got me the award." She considers the award merely as recognition of the teaching profession.

Ms. Cwidak says that this is definitely the biggest public achievement in her teaching career. But the biggest achievement is "to see students eager to learn."

On behalf of the student body, THE TOWER would like to congratulate Ms. Cwidak and wish her luck in the national competition.

What's news

Showing our pride

Today has been Pride Day, sponsored by the JA Student Government. The purpose was to boost spirits and show pride for our state-ranked basketball team. Students were to dress crazily, but within the dress code. We hope everyone enjoyed their chance to show spirit - see you at the game!

Mr. Bibbs returns

Let's welcome Mr. Bibbs back to John Adams! He will be coming to school on a full-time basis starting after vacation, around the beginning of the semester. Now, Mrs. Katona and Mr. Bibbs share the vice-principal duties because Mr. Bibbs is working part time. When Mr. Bibbs returns full-time, Mrs. Katona will move back to her original position as guidance counselor.

SADD continues this year

The John Adams chapter of S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk) is continuing its program again this year. The group will be meeting during activity period and after school on Thursdays. Initial activities will be aimed at spreading awareness of the organization and the problem behind it: drunk driving. Student support is greatly needed; anyone interested should contact Michael Rouse, Kara Kelly, or any other member.

Jobs in school

By Tracey Steward

Now more than ever, high school organizations are reaching out and grabbing opportunities for students to obtain jobs in the fields of their choice.

Programs like I.C.T., D.E.C.A., C.O.E., and O.E.A. are a majority of such programs that represent a life long career for students.

I.C.T. (Industrial Cooperative Training) is a program designed mainly for students with career objectives in trade, industrial, and health occupations. This program requires the student to spend one period a day in a related training class plus at least fifteen hours a week working at jobs in their field of study.

D.E.C.A. (Distributive Education Clubs of America) is for those students who have selected marketing or distribution as being one of their career objectives. This program also requires class instruction and on-the-job training.

C.O.E. (Cooperative Office Education) is a vocational program that includes part time classes which count for one credit, and on-the-job training, which counts for two credits. It is designed to attract students who wish to apply their typing, accounting, and other office skills in jobs concerning their interests.

Adams Senior Nancy Nieter says, "It (C.O.E.) gives training and experience in the job that you're interested in." Fellow member and President of the Chapter, Janice McEndarfer, adds, "It also gives you excellent references for present and future jobs."

C.O.E. is just a subset of the national organization O.E.A. (Office Education Association). This group consists of well over 3,000 members interested in perfecting their office skills and securing future careers.

O.E.A. and C.O.E. do not, however, relate to just classes and jobs. Students have been able to partake in a bake and craft sale at Kroger's to raise money for the Special Olympics program, type mailing labels for the March of Dimes, and participate in the U93 Christmas Seal Tree at Scottsdale Mall to benefit the Lung Association. These programs also offer chances to for students to travel to other states for national conventions.

Students need to become more aware of these clubs and participate in them to obtain knowledge, character, and leadership qualities. Hopefully, these programs will provide these qualities in students so that they will be prepared for the "real working world."

Remembering the struggles

by Richard Primus

On December 18th, just after sundown, candles were lit in Jewish homes across the world. The eight-day holiday of Hannuka had begun.

Most American non-Jews have heard of Hannuka. The biggest holiday of the year for Jewish people, right? The Jewish Christmas, right?

Wrong.

Hannuka has nothing at all to do with Christmas.

Hannuka isn't the biggest Jewish holiday. In fact, it isn't even close.

Hannuka, in reality, is a celebration of religious freedom. Although most Americans -- and even many American Jews -- don't realize it, Hannuka is like an independence day.

The story of Hannuka is as follows:

Over two thousand years ago, the Jewish people in the land of Israel were under the rule of the Greek empires of Alexander the Great. When Alexander died, his domain was divided into three smaller kingdoms. One of these kingdoms, called the Assyrian-Greek kingdom, was ruled by a king named Antiochus.

Antiochus occupied Israel in force and outlawed Judaism.

Jews were forbidden to pray, to study their religion, or to use the Temple in Jerusalem, which Antiochus made into a center for Greek practices.

In the year 168 B.C.E., a Jew named Judah Macabee began to lead a revolt against Antiochus. Three years later, the army of the Macabees captured Jerusalem and drove the Assyrian-Greeks from the land of Israel.

Jews could once again worship freely, but one problem arose. In the Temple stood a menorah which was to be lit constantly but which the Greeks had extinguished. Upon entering the Temple, the Macabees discovered that only enough oil remained to burn for one day.

Eight days were needed to get more oil. According to the story of Hannuka, the oil expected to burn for only one day burned for eight days, while new oil was obtained. To remember this miracle, the holiday of Hannuka lasts eight days, during which time Jews light menorahs.

Hannuk, therefore, is a celebration of freedom won, having no historical ties whatsoever to Christmas. In fact, Hannuka is a much older holiday than Christmas.

In recent times, however, many people began to associate Hannuka with Christmas simply because they fall at the same time of the year. Many Jews began to copy the Christian custom of exchanging presents in December, although the true Jewish gift-giving season is in March.

On December 18th after sundown, Jews again remembered the fight against Antiochus and the miracle of the jar of oil. The phrase that embodies the story of Hannuka will be repeated again and again: "Nes gadol haya sham" -- a great miracle happened there.

X-Mas shuffle

by Paula Makris

In order to capture the true spirit of Christmas, the incurable romantics and believers will bake Christmas cookies, sip eggnog, go caroling, and, of course, go to church. The last place to anticipate Christmas in a wholesome, traditional way, as most people would agree, is the shopping mall.

Why is it then, that every day from 3:30 to 9:30, the entirety of South Bend, with a few odd thousands from surrounding towns, are trying either to enter or depart these buildings where the average Christmas shopper goes temporarily insane? The only solution is to accept it as another strange practice of people today. To the unwary: malls can be dangerous places!

Everyone, I'm sure, will have one last minute gift to buy; one last time to rush frantically to the mall. There are, of course, those models of perfection who did their Christmas shopping last January at the After Christmas sales, but we won't talk about them.

The first rule to surviving the mall is recognizing it for what it is: a large unbearably hot, crowded building. Prepare for this as best you can; acupuncture has been known to work.

The second key is the comprehension that the mall is full of pushy people: pushy shoppers, pushy salespeople, even pushy Santas. (After the last five kids had wet on you, wouldn't you be tempted to push the next little darling back into Mom's arms?)

Now that you understand the mall and its inhabitants, try to picture this scene and recreate it exactly. Walk into the mall, follow the flow of the crowd. This is important unless you want to look like a hockey player for holiday pictures. Enter pre-selected store, pick up pre-selected gift, and pay for pre-selected gift. This last item is also important -- for obvious reasons.

Have we hit the first snap already? Ah yes, you have absolutely no idea of what to get. Well, that's understandable. After all, Aunt Helen already has five bathrobes, seven pairs of slippers, and has so many comforters that she's using them to insulate the attic.

For those people who have not yet started shopping, I have no advice. I can only wish you good luck. But to all -- even January shoppers -- Merry Christmas.

Christmas tree decision

By Marc Conklin

There is an ever-increasing problem with Christmas.

It stems from a sapless trunk and needles us with plastic pine. It is a plant made in a plant. It has no roots, so it has no depth.

This menace is the "assembly-required" Christmas tree.

Recently, I had the opportunity to witness the effects of a family's first artificial tree. They bought it unwillingly because a family member is allergic to real Christmas trees.

There it stood -- perfectly tall, perfectly green, perfectly symmetrical, perfectly disgusting. When, to everyone's surprise, an empty space was discovered, the solution was, "Just bend one branch down and another up."

How can a tree be enjoyed if there is a chance that it might melt near a fire? Of course, there are artificial fires . . .

The real beauty in a natural tree is in its imperfection. It is outdoors where it is cold, not in some warehouse with utopian surroundings.

A real tree rarely fits in the trunk of a car with the door closed, but a plastic one can be broken down to fit in a little box that could probably be carried home in the glove compartment.

When putting up a genuine tree, you get sap on your hands and needles all over the floor. When "assembling" an imposter, the only thing you need worry about is breaking it.

And finally, after the real tree is up, there is the annual ritual of hiding the "bad side" from view. With the imitation, there is, of course, no bad side.

The world should have learned from 'A Charlie Brown Christmas.' No matter how feeble-looking a natural tree is, it has much more holiday character than its counterfeit.

Getting off the blocks with confidence

by Karl Roemer

Recently, the 1984-85 John Adams boys' swimming team took on the third ranked team in the state, Valparaiso. The match-up proved to be a lesson in humbleness for the Eagles. The score was 65-115.

The final score, however, fails to indicate the rather encouraging future for the team. "We're young and inexperienced," states coach Brian Cook, "but as the season goes, watch out."

The team has had a slow start. The main reason for this slow start is the lack of practices. "We couldn't even start practicing in our own pool until the day before our first meet," Cook says. Because of a leak in the school's pool, the team was forced to travel to Riley's pool every afternoon.

"Now we practice twice daily, but earlier in the season, we could only get in one afternoon workout. I think this hampered our development. Just recently, we've really begun to improve, and I'm optimistic about our chances."

The main reason for this optimism is the team depth. The Eagles have twenty swimmers led by co-captains and state hopefuls Scott Terlep and P.H. Mullen. Among the twenty are nine returning from last year's 5-7 squad. Returning are Terlep, Mullen, Martin Rohan, Larry Piser, Karl Vogel, Doug Sakaguchi, John Newell, Pat Brothers and Jeff Terlep.

Scott Terlep, Rohan, and Mullen lead the Eagles in the freestyle events. Newell and freshman surprise John Farmer swim in the breaststroke.

The leading backstroker is Pat Brothers. The diving trio of sophomores, Piser, Sakaguchi and John Rhoutson will be counted on to produce now and in the future.

"With this kind of talent and youth, I think this team will take sectionals in two years," comments Scott Terlep, one of only three seniors on the team. For now, the Eagles will settle for a probable third or fourth place finish in the NIC.

"We'll probably finish 5-6," relies Mullen. "This year was supposed to be a big year because of our depth. 5-6 is really not that bad. A couple of the meets could go either way."

With this depth and optimism, the Eagles hope to come out on top, and exhibit the prestige involved in competing for John Adams.

Showdown with Clay

by Guy Hamilton

The 1984-85 basketball campaign is preparing the team for a tough season. The number one pre-season state rankings was given to the Eagles, but even with this high honor, Coach Hadaway was concerned because his team has one of the toughest schedules in the state, including Warsaw, L&M, and the always-tough NIC. Other concerns are his young team (which has only three seniors out of the top eight players) and an injured Kevin DeCraene.

Last weekend, Adams went up and down. The Eagles looked impressive in defeating LaSalle on Friday but lost on Saturday to 2nd ranked Fort Wayne Northrop by one point.

Tonight is a showdown of the two powerhouses of South Bend. Adams plays Clay here. Clay has been beating all of its opponents easily, but this will be their first real test of the short season. Adams hopes to get back on track again, after the disheartening loss to Northrop.

Next week, Adams will participate in the Holiday Tournament in the ACC. They open against Washington on Dec. 27 at 1:30 p.m. The winner will face either Clay or LaSalle on Dec. 28 at noon. The finals will be 8:30 that night. Other teams are Plymouth, St. Joseph, Riley, and Warsaw.

Adams continues their tough season and will need fan support to pull out victories. With Clay and Holiday Tournament victories, Adams will move back up in the rankings.

In the fast lane

Ready for their tourney

The girls' basketball team has had its ups and downs this year, but they are looking for a strong performance next week as they participate in the Holiday Tournament.

Adams opens against Mishawaka. They play on Wednesdays Dec. 26 at 3:00 p.m. in St. Joe's gym. The winner will then face the Riley vs. Plymouth victor at 10:30 a.m. Friday Dec. 28 in the ACC. The finals of the tourney will be Thursday at 7:00 in the ACC. Other participants are Clay, LaSalle, Washington and St. Joe.

Good luck girls, and bring home a trophy!

Regaining life

Although no one in the past has fully supported the John Adams Hockey Club, this season has proved different. The hockey team, under Senior Captain John Rohan and assistants Steve Gruenig and Brian Bartlett, has jumped out to its most successful start in six years.

The players have a bright outlook for the season. Senior Rick Fedder says, "We are moving forward in the right direction, playing hard, and winning games. In order to be the best, we must beat Clay and Riley."

Go out and support the icers!

Go Crazy

By Michelle Mengel

Several Adams' students recently attended a phenomenal concert by Prince and the Revolution. The concert was held at the Rosemont Horizon, just outside of Chicago, on December 9. Prince is currently one of the hottest acts on stage due to the success of his film, "Purple Rain," which was Prince's film debut. The LP for the film was also equally successful.

The students obtained the tickets through the Ticketron in early October and counted down the many days before the concert. All expectations were finally met when they saw a show beyond compare.

Prince's warm up act was Sheila E., whose provocative songs and erotic movements brought the crowd to its feet. She sang many songs from her album, "The Glamorous Life" and a solo version of "Erotic City." Her skills in playing the drums was amazing for all observers.

Shiela E.'s act was quickly followed up as Prince and the Revolution took over stage. As the lights dimmed, thousands of carnations fell from the ceiling, and Prince howled to the audience, "Chicago, I've come to play with you."

He started it off with one of his songs from the "Purple Rain" album, "Let's Go Crazy." He then went on to play some songs from his last album, "1999."

Prince put on a fabulous show. His dancing and singing ability, though very suggestive, entertained the crowd for three hours and forty-five minutes. He mixed in his old songs as well as the new. Other songs performed were "Free," "Beautiful Ones," "Darling Nikki," "Delirious," "Little Red Corvette," "1999," and "Controversy."

One of the students remarked, "The best part about the concert was that Prince really talked to us. Most singers don't do that. I love his voice." They were all amazed that the concert lasted as long as it did.

Prince came back to do an encore with three of his best songs, "I Would Die 4 U," "Baby, I'm a Star," and the title cut, "Purple Rain." He played "Purple Rain" for twenty minutes as Prince circled the stage so that everybody could see him and he could see everybody else.

He thanked everybody for coming and asked them to come again. Those students who attended the concert certainly would, if they could.

Letter to the Editor

Cheering in the stands

The boys basketball team is off to a fine start, but there is a problem concerning the home games that has to have a solution. The problem is the students standing in the student section during the middle of the game.

When the team starts to hit a few baskets, the students get on their feet and begin yelling encouraging words. They try to distract the opponents so Adams will be able to win, but soon an authority figure will walk over in front of the students and say "sit down, the people in back of you can't see!"

The people in back of the students did pay for a ticket and have every right to see the game. Why should they have to stand up with every point Adams scores?

The players, however, love the encouragement from the students when they get on their feet and yell. It pumps them up.

And, there is a simple solution to the problem that will make both the students and the rest of the fans happy.

Rope off the bottom three or four rows of the Mezzanine section. The fans that sit in the Mezzanine will be able to see over the standing students and will not complain about not seeing the game. The students will be able to stand the entire game if they wish without anyone screaming at them.

With this simple solution, "Hadaway Shack" will become a "Death Valley" for its opponents.

From,
The senior fans

Do parents need help?

by Jennifer Van Es

Are you one of those teens who never seems to receive what you asked for at Christmas? If so, maybe I can shed some light on this phenomenon.

One reason why parents don't buy the "right" gifts for their teens is that maybe they don't feel a $65 pair of jeans or a new car is vital to their teenagers right now. Consequently they buy things that the teen needs. Personally I don't feel that this is a very valid theory because parents have the rest of the year to buy things that you need. Right?

Another possibility could be that parents buy the wrong things because they don't know what the teen really wants. This is obviously invalid. I don't know about you, but I make it perfectly clear to my parents about what I want for Christmas.

The last explanation that comes to mind is that parents don't buy the "right" gifts because they cannot hear.

Everyone knows that winter weather is the time for colds, flu, and other assorted aches and pains. Two to three weeks before Christmas (when you really start to beg for that pair of jeans or the new car) your parents catch a tremendous head cold. The cold infects their ears, causing a loss of hearing. This in turn inhibits them from hearing the true wishes of their teenager.

Just remember that there's always next year to try again.

Problems with the Food Drive

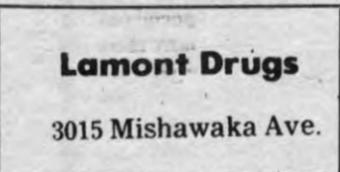

Student Government sponsored a Food Drive this past week. Although signs were painted and announcements were made, there was a lack of support from the student body and faculty (as of this writing). This should indicate that a new system may be more productive in raising the intended goal.

Perhaps a Student Government representative could have been assigned to the 1st hour classes, receiving help from the teacher. Their goal could then be to collect one can for each student in the class, with a reward for the class that brings in the most. Thus, a successful 1500 cans would be produced.

From the Doorknob

There was a boy from Adams school,
His name's Lance and he's very cool,
While sitting in the lunchroom one day,
He came up with a cute idea, I'd say,
His idea was a piece of cake,
Borrow some grapes and raisons he'd make,
Right in his locker, what a treat,
Making some raisons, but not to eat,
Ingenious, I'd say, wouldn't you,
Good luck to Lance because I LIKE YOU!!!
