Big Loss In Ratables To Be Felt Bigger Tax Load For Homeowners

Jersey City home-owners today faced the possibility of an extra $5 increase in their tax rate—on top of a projected $12 boost—as a result of a huge loss in real estate ratables.

The city's ratables, including those involved in the recent railroad assessment settlement, will be down about $25,000,000 this year.

THIS COULD represent a hike of about $6. The $12 increase is possible under the general appropriations aspect of the budget which Mayor Thomas Gangemi proposed Monday.

Still undetermined are anticipated revenue other than ratables, school requirements, the city's share of county taxes, and any surplus the city may be able to use as an offsetting factor.

The Chamber of Commerce has estimated a boost of $21.84 in the tax rate. The 1961 levy was $98.13 per $1,000 assessed valuation.

THE RAILROAD settlement cut real properties assessments about $18,000,000. Other real estate property is down $5,405,885.

Actually assessments on real estate, excluding the railroads, are down about $9,000,000, but new construction offsets about $2,500,000 of this total.

More than half of the $4,405,885 loss in ratables has been anticipated for four years when the city began foreclosure proceedings on about $7,300,000 in tax title lien cases.

MOST OF THIS PROPERTY was railroad property that had been taken off the rail tax books and locally assessed. It was known that the railroads did not expect to pay these taxes. During this

Heights Girl, 3, Struck by Car, On Danger List

A three-year-old Hudson City girl is on the danger list at the Jersey City Medical Center with a skull fracture received yesterday when she was struck by an automobile in front of her home.

Janet Corbett, of 234 Bowers St., ran from between two parked cars into the path of an automobile driven by James Reiser, 19, of 7 Heckman Dr. She was taken to the hospital and treated for cuts of the face as well as for the skull injury.

Bludgeon Murderer Kills 3rd Woman Again Victim on Coast

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 33-year-old mother was found bludgeoned to death in her apartment last night in a murder police said appeared similar to two previous slayings this month.

The body of Jesse Kahlan was discovered by her husband, Samuel, when he returned home from work. Kahlan owns a grocery.

THE VICTIM was beaten on the head, arms and chest, Sgt. Clyde Giroux said. The body was found in the dining room of the new apartment in the Baldwin Hills district. Officers said the apartment showed signs of a fierce struggle, or else someone "messed it up" searching for something.

Four days ago the body of Mrs. Charlotte Schmidt, 46, was found in her "above average" home in Fullerton. She was beaten to death with a blunt instrument. Officers said Mrs. Schmidt's

Lure Is $1,600 Pay Differential

If it weren't for certain restrictions, the entire Jersey City Police Department would have applied for jobs as New York City cops, the president of the Jersey City Patrolmen's Benevolent Association local said today.

Patrolman Timothy Moloney said age limitations blocked many men, including him, from applying last night when the New York force held a recruitment session at the Jersey City office of the New Jersey Division of Employment Security, 383 Summit Ave.

SOME ELIGIBLE men could not show up because they were on duty last night and were refused time off for the occasion, Moloney said.

"We would have had the whole department here," Moloney said. As it was, of almost 300 people who turned out and paid a

The Show Closes

The great television quiz show scandal ended yesterday with suspended sentences meted out to dismal "contestants" who once were the glamorous talk of the nation.

Once they had denied to a grand jury that the quizzes were fixed. Later they told a second grand jury the truth. Yesterday's proceedings were in punishment for their story to the first grand jury.

So closes a chapter of history which could be called "An American Craze of the Late Fifties." It was a weird business of easily made money and, for yesterday's contestants, the most expensive dollars they ever will acquire.

Arroyo Helpful, Too

Secret of Ford's Success: 'Pitch as Hard as I Can'

By STEVE SNIDER

Whitey Ford's friends still are "bugging" him.

They needled him unmercifully last winter because he never had won 20 games in any season for the New York Yankees but he thought he had them stopped when he wound up 1961 with a spectacular 25-4 record.

"NOW THEY'RE bugging me because I can't finish," said the whimsical 33-year-old left-hander.

As the highest paid pitcher in Yankee history, with an estimated $50,000 coming up for '62, Whitey can afford to joke about that fact that while he started 39 games last year he finished only 11.

"Where would Luis Arroyo be if I finished 'em all?" he quipped. Arroyo, king of the Yankee relievers, frequently mopped up for Whitey.

ACTUALLY, said Ford, there's a mighty good reason he can't go all the way more often.

"When I first came up here they told me to pitch as hard as I could as long as I could," he said. "And that's what I've always done. The Yankees always have good relief pitchers and I figure if I can keep the score down for six or seven innings pitching as hard as I can the Yankees will get enough runs to win the game.

"I never did try learning to pace myself and I'm too old to change now."

WHITEY FORD
