

Four seniors receive Alumni scholarships

For the 14th consecutive year, the Cheltenham High School Alumni Association has fulfilled one of its original goals; the awarding of scholarships to worthy seniors. This year, $3,000 was divided among four outstanding members of the class of '92. Adam Kraemer was awarded the Jack Wagman Scholarship. Adam was a Merit Scholarship Semi-Finalist and winner of the Philadelphia Young Playwrights competition. In addition he was an active member of the CHS Theatre. Adam will be attending Tufts University in the fall where he plans to pursue a major in economics. Katy Rudin was awarded the Bobbie Bers Rose Scholarship. An active student, Katy was secretary of the senior class as well as a member of the Band, Ensemble and Honors Choir. A National Merit letter of commendation winner, Katy will be attending Temple University with an eye towards Elementary Education. Ian Spiegel is another strong member of all of Cheltenham's theatrical productions. He was also a member of the Debate Team, Problem Solving Team, the Ensemble and the Golf Team. Ian will be attending Muhlenberg College in Allentown and plans to major in biology. The final Alumni Scholarship Award winner was Jason Young. Jason was a National Merit Scholarship Semi-Finalist. A member of the Debate Team, World Affairs Council and the Problem Solving Team, Jason will be attending Tulane University where he plans to major in International Relations.

Past scholarship winners revisited

During the past 14 years, the Cheltenham High School Alumni Association has awarded 47 scholarships totaling nearly $30,000 to deserving seniors. Whatever became of these promising students? After weeks of determined investigation, The Panther's Tale was able to locate many of these young men and women. 1992 has found them achieving great success in their varied fields.

In 1981, Arthur Karloff entered the University of Pennsylvania where he earned a BA in Physics. He went to work for GE Aerospace as a software developer and a systems engineer. He returned to Penn Wharton where he earned his MBA in 1991. He is currently an independent manufacturing consultant. Mary Goebel '81 graduated from Bucknell University in 1985. Moving to Washington D.C., Mary was employed by an international public relations, advertising and market research company. After two years she enrolled at Wharton and received her MBA in 1989. Upon graduation she returned to Washington to work for Psychiatric Institute of America. For two years she traveled nationwide opening new hospitals. Mary currently lives in Atlanta with her husband, Jim Ashenfelter, where she now works for Kaiser Providence doing projections for this total health care provider.

Beryl Sandler '83 graduated from the University of Richmond in 1987. She was graduated from Eastern Virginia Medical School in 1991 and is beginning her residency there in surgery. Last May, she tracked the Chel-

Reavy steps down from head of guidance

Perhaps you were one of the students in Joe Reavy's social studies class at Thomas Williams Junior High in 1959. Little did Reavy think when he started out as a young teacher that he would leave the classroom and begin a new career in guidance at Cheltenham High School, with the responsibility for seeing that seniors were matched with the colleges appropriate to their skills and academic talents. But that job was "in the stars" for him, for his interest was people.

Having first prepared to be a Christian Brother, Reavy left that vocation to become a teacher, where his concern for helping others is what made his guidance career possible and caused the man himself to be so beloved by all. In 1963 he became a guidance counselor at the high school. In 1973 he was appointed Director of Guidance and Special Education. Over the decades he helped thousands of Cheltenham seniors to academic success by his continued encouragement with academic dilemmas and by his willingness to give them time when they needed a listening ear.

Director of Guidance
Joe Reavy

Reavy's activities have extended beyond the realm of guidance. His interest in the theater has led him to become assistant director of both the fall play and the spring musical. For the past five years he has been sponsor of the Student Council. In all these activities Reavy kept in close touch with students, enabling him give guidance and advice outside of his office.

Reavy's private life is filled with poetry, music, and family. Proud of his Irish heritage, he studies the Irish poets, especially William Butler Yeats, as an avocation. He gives music lessons, and has published a book of music in the Irish tradition written by his father. He speaks with pride of his daughter who was just graduated from Princeton.

Reavy will be remembered for his kindness, his Irish wit, and one famous quote imprinted on the minds of the teachers at the annual start of school meetings, "There will be no course changes this year." Of course, there were always many changes because of his genuine interest in the welfare of the students.

And now, in the year 1992, Joe Reavy is about to retire. A great gap will be left in the structure of the school administration; Reavy cannot be replaced in today's world where there are fewer people interested in other human beings and the main concerns are money and self-serving interests. Reavy is a man who thinks more of responsibilities than rights, and more of people than money. He will be sorely missed by all.

Norton retires after 32 years at CHS

After thirty-two years of dedicated service to Cheltenham High School, Bill Norton is retiring, leaving behind a sizable legacy and a record difficult to equal, particularly considering the obstacles he'd had to overcome throughout his career.

Bill Norton was the first black teacher hired by the Cheltenham School District. Back in 1961 he stood in front of his first group of students to teach history; the job was a challenge because there were few black children in the class and Mr. Norton wondered about his acceptance. With his academic credits, however, none doubted that he would become an outstanding teacher and soon move up in the ranks of administrators. In 1969 he became department chairperson of social studies, and after his tenure there moved on to become housemaster at the high school. In 1979 he was made Assistant Principal.

Some of you may remember Mr.

Norton's outstanding political science lessons. His renown spread so that he taught not only at Cheltenham, but also at Rutgers University, one summer at Harvard University and for 15 years at the University of the Arts. While at Harvard, Mr. Norton developed the use of periodicals in conjunction with textbooks. This enabled students to read not only the most current material on the topics but also articles that spanned the political spectrum from right to left.

Honors students ask "why," which was the impetus for Mr. Norton to institute the Senior Independent Project. Originally this program was started as an academic research project that encouraged students to get out into the field and talk to practitioners. One such project, Mr. Norton recalled, had a student interviewing police and prisoners on the topic of brutality. The two sides had varied opinions on the extent

The Cheltenham District is saying goodbye to many beloved and familiar friends. Including two junior high school principals: Dr. John Townsend, who led Thomas Williams Jr. High and Cedarbrook Middle School for the past 26 years and Mr. Dan Fitzgerald who was principal of Ogontz Jr. High until its closing and a District employee for a total of 23 years.

Reunion Roundup

Class of 1932 - 60th Reunion The reunion was held June 6, 1992 at the Rydal Country Club. Eighteen classmates gathered with guests to enjoy dinner and good conversation with old friends. Bernard Rothchild, a member of the Alumni Hall of Fame who was unable to attend, telephoned to speak with several of his classmates. The reunion was chaired by John Thress with the able assistance of Herb Fleisher, Ruth Bohren Holden, Virginia Schick and Florence Ehrlich Fedder. A good time was had by all.

Class of 1936 - 55th Reunion On October 26, 1991 the Class of '36 held its 55th reunion luncheon at the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel in Plymouth Meeting. In attendance were 54 classmates and 26 spouses/guests representing 11 states. Outside the local area, California, Florida, Hawaii, Indiana, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia were represented. The committee included: Barbara Snedeker Bates, Jean Hawkins Dreisbach, Ruth Campbell Eddowes, Jane Shorday Johnson, Dick Kelly, Joe Reedy, Bill Rittenhouse, Charles Sudlow (MC) and Karl Thress.

Class of 1951 - 40th Reunion The Class assembled for the big night at the Lu Lu Temple Country Club on October 26, 1991. Entertained by the music of "Banjo Joe" the 78 classmates enjoyed reminiscing throughout the evening. Two classmates, John Linsk and Maier Green, who have been among the missing since graduation were located and made their first return visit from Florida for the Reunion. The able Reunion committee was made up of: Beryl Cohen Halpern, Richard Dalsemer, Margret Weber Hawkins, Elsa-Lu Greenblatt Berkowitz, Ellen Rosenau Lawrence, Sandy Goldenberg Hockfield, and Ivan Hamburg.

Class of 1952 - 40th Reunion The class met for their 9th reunion since graduation at the Old York Road C.C.

on March 28, 1992. 90 people attended the dinner. The reunion committee was chaired by Barbara Ball Portner. She was ably assisted by Joan David Sundheim, Janet Fester Blew, Joanna Randolph Rott, Harriet Swoyer Horner, Alvin Waxman and Louis Stern. The class was happy to greet Ann Prosser Post and Barbara Daugherty Jenkins, two classmates that had not attended any class reunions in years.

Class of 1961 - 30th Reunion was held November 29, 1991 at Ashbourne Country Club. Over 250 classmates and friends attended the evening buffet that featured international food stations around the room. The evening, chaired by Zelda Stillman Topkiss, was a huge success. Classmates arrived from all over, including Ellen Blatt Yahuda who flew in from London for the big affair along with classmates from California, Oregon and Florida. At the end of the evening the class generously donated $750 to the Cheltenham High School Alumni Assoc. Scholarship Fund.

Class of 1971 - 20th Reunion was held November 29, 1991 at the Ironworkers Hall. The Class of 1971's big night was saved from almost certain destruction by classmate Bill Staples who found the hall and music for the class after the company hired to coordinate the Reunion went out of business. Many class members lost the $60 per person fee. Great job Bill!

Class of 1981 - 10th Reunion was held at the Airport Hilton on Saturday, November 30, 1991. The reunion was attended by 160 classmates who were entertained by the classes personal magician and master of ceremonies Marc Frumer. The class took a moment to light candles to remember departed classmates Peggy Woodhead, David Dornstein and Paul McGough. The Reunion committee was headed by class president Patti Smith Hinchey. She was helped by classmates Dan Walsh, Adam Kazan, Adam Yaller, Ted Rickles, Steve Grosswald, Bob Cohen and Scott Weissman. The committee produced a 48 page collection of classmates' biographies. The class also generously donated $1000 to create a scholarship for a current senior with financial need.

Class of 1986 - 5th Reunion was held at the Glenside War Memorial Hall on Friday, November 29, 1991. The class shared hors d'oeuvres and drinks as they swapped stories of the last five years. A slide show showing scenes from their Junior and Senior Proms brought back memories and a few laughs. Everyone attending received a 24 ounce mug designed by class artist Michael Kornstein. The Reunion was planned by the class officers, Jay Glickman, Ken Spivack, Rob Beck and Scott Steinberg.

The following Reunions are in the planning stages. If you want to volunteer to help or need additional information you can contact one of the following:

tenham Band down in Norfolk, Virginia and enjoyed a lunchtime concert for her efforts. Matthew Cole '83, graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with a BA in political science. He moved to New York where he worked for an entertainment public relations firm handling such stars as Patti LaBelle. After working as a para-legal for a NY firm for one and a half years he returned to Philadelphia where he just completed his second year at Temple Law School. This summer he is clerking at the law firm of Dilworth Paxson where he is specializing in corporate security law.

In 1984, Johnna Corbett received an Alumni Scholarship to attend Manor Junior College where she earned an AS in Administrative Secretarial Science in 1986. While attending school she began working for the Cheltenham School District as a bookkeeper. In August, 1987 she was promoted to Secretary to the Assistant Superintendent for Business Affairs and stenographer to the Board of School Directors. Jeanne Scanlon '84 attended Lehigh University where she earned a BA in 1988. She has worked as a Project Director for Eshelman and Townsend a marketing research company in Wyncote. She will be moving to New York City in September.

In 1985, the president of the senior class, Allen Wolinsky won an Alumni Scholarship which he used at the University of Pennsylvania. He earned his BA in history in 1989. He served as a congressional aide to the late John Heinz and was a member of the staff of Harris Wofford. Allen plans to begin Temple Law in September. Classmate Anthony Ciabarra '85 graduated from Cornell in 1989. The Westinghouse Scholar is currently in his third year of a PhD/MD program at Yale University and is engaged to a Yale Law student.

Although most of the more recent scholarship winners are still completing their undergraduate studies, the Cheltenham High School Alumni Association is sure that they too will make the entire Cheltenham community proud of their accomplishments.

CHS graduate awarded MacArthur Fellowship

Anthropologist Steven Feld, C.H.S. '67, has spent 15 years trying to capture the interaction of the Kaluli people of the Papua New Guinea rain forest with their environment. He has recorded everything from the whoops and yodels of men as they cut down trees to a Kaluli woman singing a duet with a waterfall.

"The woman was singing not only with water, but singing like water -- imitating the sounds around her," said Feld, a University of Texas at Austin professor. "Whether they are singing along with crickets, the birds, the rain or the streams, I want to show the Kaluli people becoming one with the rain forest's musical ecology."

Feld's interest in the relation of music and mythology to the environment is one of the reasons why he was named a 1991 recipient of a $260,000 MacArthur Fellowship. He is one of 31 persons receiving the fellowships this year.

The MacArthur Fellowships which range from $150,000 to $375,000 over five years, are given to free creative individuals from economic pressures and encourage them to pursue research or artistic endeavors. "By supporting these fellows, highly talented individuals working in a wide range of fields, the foundation means to honor creative persons everywhere," said a statement from the MacArthur Foundation, which has awarded more than $1 billion in grants since 1978.

Feld's interest in this area grew out of his background as a jazz trombonist, an instrument he played in the Cheltenham Band and Orchestra. He then became interested in African and Oceanic musics and went off to the jungles of Papua New Guinea to study how the people of the rain forest adapt to the varied sounds that surround them.

In the spring of 1990 with the help of Grateful Dead drummer Mickey Hart, Feld completed an hour-long recording of songs and sounds called Voices of the Rain Forest, which is available in record stores.

"I have found that the Kaluli people of Papua New Guinea are so in-synch with their environment that the music they create is intertwined with the natural sounds of the rain forest they live in," said Feld, associate professor of anthropology and music and director of UT Austin's Center for Folklore and Ethnomusicology.

Feld discovered that the people had myths about origins of crying and song and poetry coming from the calls of birds. "It has turned out that this music isn't just some surface fluff. It was really heavily linked to the tribe's spiritual world, and to adaptation and the environment," he said.

Dr. Feld then extended his research to the sounds of frogs, crickets and water. "It's not just that they think about birds and think about water like music -- they sing duets with birds; they're whistling like them, and they're performing with them. It's not just that the birds inspire all this, it's that they're good to sing with as well. They're part of the orchestra," said Feld. His book Sound and Sentiment: Weeping, Poetics, and Song in Kaluli Expression won the 1991 J.I. Staley Award for outstanding books of anthropology.

Cheltenham forms foundation Daniel Seltzer '67 elected chairman

The Cheltenham school community has a new resident, the Cheltenham School District Foundation. Its major goal is to promote the quality of education in the schools by providing funding for innovative and creative programs. The Cheltenham School District is not unique in these troubled financial times. With a limited tax base and minimal federal and state funding, the school district needs other sources of income to help preserve those characteristics which have always made Cheltenham a leading force in public education. Following 18 months of study, a Citizens' Advisory Committee recommended the establishment of an educational foundation to aid the district in providing those additional funds.

Formed in September 1991 as a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation, the Foundation has already received 20 grant applications from the professional staff for the 1992-93 school year under the Foundation's Teacher Grant Program. Funding ideas include innovative projects in the Humanities, Math, Reading, Art, Music, the Environment and self worth. To pay for these projects and to establish an endowment, the Foundation is in the midst of its first annual fund raising drive. During this drive, Lincoln Investment Planning, Inc. of Wyncote, will match all funds raised by July 1st up to $5,000.

For more information about the Foundation, its goals, structure, activities and how you can help, write to the Cheltenham School District Foundation, 1000 Ashbourne Road, Elkins Park, PA 19117 or call the Foundation at (215) 456-9636.

Cheltonian captures journalism awards

With a great staff of editors and the purchase of a complete computer system, the Cheltonian has entered the 21st century. Using a new 11 x 17 format and a new layout program known as Ventura the Cheltonian has been able to upgrade their finished product to award winning status. In addition to the new computer equipment, the Cheltonian has been linked via modem to a national journalism network called the Youth News Service in Washington. The Service allows over 300 high school newspapers throughout the United States to share news stories of interest to today's youth. Editors-in-chief Andy Shurman, '92 and Danny Burns along with Cheltonian sponsor Elizabeth Westerman Wolpert, '54 have given leadership to this prize-winning newspaper. This year the Cheltonian has won the Keystone Award from the Pennsylvania School Press Association ranking our paper as the number one paper in the state. In addition, the Cheltonian placed first in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and the American Scholastic Press Association's competition.

At the Temple University Press Tournament, the Cheltonian captured the Silver Cup emblematic of distinguished work in the field of journalism. Individual honors were won by Joel Finkelstein for editorials, David Stamm for critical writing, Chris Winston for photography, Semra Mesulam for news writing and Danny Burns for sports.

Layout of this issue of the Panther's Tale was done by Cheltonian layout editor Noam Freedman on the Cheltonian's new equipment. The Alumni Association says thank you.

to which police brutality existed. This was such an eye opener for this student that when he later became an attorney, he fought for legislation to protect juvenile offenders. As Mr. Norton recalled, "these were exciting lessons for the students and me." Student projects that have been done as a result of class "extend their education. It doesn't stop at the end of a semester.

One example of taking the classroom into real life was a summer program in government taught by Mr. Norton and Mrs. Lila Rosenbluth. This course took one group of students to the 1972 Democratic Convention in Miami. Due to a ticket crunch, admission to the convention floor was very difficult. A chance meeting between Mr. Norton and Hubert Humphrey in a Florsheim Shoe Store enabled the class to get all the passes they needed to the convention. Mr. Norton was always a persuasive talker.

Mr. Norton is an inveterate reader, enjoying two or three books a week. Also a musician, he plays violin in the Adult School Orchestra and a symphony orchestra. School duties and personal interests did not keep him from being close to his two sons, one an attorney and an architect and the other an attorney.

Mr. Norton is a man who can't sit still, according to his acquaintances, so retirement will not bring his life to a standstill. We can picture him climbing into his three-year-old car, which already has 40,000 miles on it, to visit friends around the country.

Boys', girls' basketball teams win division titles

This past winter season saw a rare occurrence in the Cheltenham High School gymnasium. For the first time in memory, the boys' and girls' basketball teams each won the Suburban I Liberty Division title. For the girls, under coaches Robert Schaefer Mike Houghton and Lewis Wisnoff '76 this was the sixth consecutive title. Led by thousand point career scorer Dana Mills, the Lady Panthers rolled to an impressive 21-3 regular season record. Dana became the all-time leading Cheltenham scorer, boy or girl, with 1316 points.

The Boys' team, under coaches Steve Daley and Scott Eveslage '89 won their first Suburban I championship since the Paul Westhead coached team of 1968 went all the way to the PIAA State Finals. The boys' team finished with an impressive 21-7 record for the season.

The big night for the basketball program came on the last night of the regular season when the boys' and girls' team took on arch-rival Abington in a double header before a sell-out crowd in our gym. The girls blew Abington off the court first with an impressive 56-42 win. This set the stage for the showdown between Abington, Suburban I champs in their division and our own championship boys' team. The Panthers blew open a close game in the last five minutes to roll to an impressive 60-50 victory.

Class gifts enrich CHS

Several years ago, Athletic Director Richard Marburg proposed a class gift project that has taken three years to complete. The project, a three-flag-pole display, now stands next to the scoreboard on the football field. The classes of 1990, 1991, and, now, 1992 have presented the poles along with flags of the United States, Pennsylvania, and Cheltenham High School. Each pole has a dedication marker at its base to remind future Cheltenham classes of the gifts.

In addition, the Class of 1991 has presented a five-foot long, free standing display case in memory of former Cheltenham teacher and Elkins Park Principal John Creedon. The case has been used this year to display such varied items as memorabilia from past Abington-Cheltenham games in November to newly created jewelry during the Unified Arts show in May. The case is a welcome addition to the main lobby area and serves as a daily reminder of Dr. Creedon.
