SEVENTH ANNUAL GAME

History of the North-South Rivalry

Spirit and suspense have been the by-words for every North-South football game since 1955. Exciting play has come to be expected from this fine annual attraction.

The floats, which are beautifully made by each school, lend a flavor to this game comparable to the finest college homecoming game. The students and faculty members who donate their time to the building of these floats should be commended by all of us.

The Spartan and Falcon bands also lend a great deal of spirit to the game as they put on another of their fascinating half-time shows. We are fortunate that we have two such fine musical organizations to entertain us.

Though the floats and bands are interesting, the game is still the biggest attraction of all.

Exciting play has always appeared in North-South games. For example:

Charlie Angwin's 80 yard kick-off return in 1957.

Frank Jeffreys' tackling Bob Mackay on the 1 yard line as the 1958 game ended.

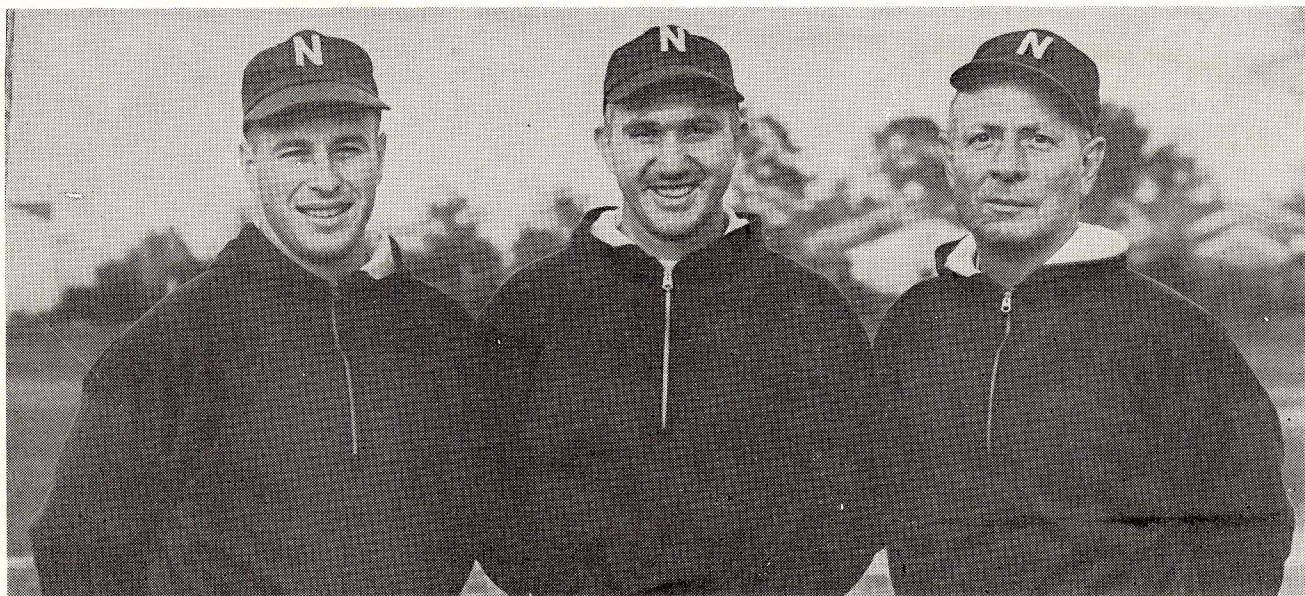

And Ken Halpern's catch of Lou Martorello's 12 yard pass on the last play from scrimmage last year.

Needless to say, we all expect an exciting and well played game. The players are ready after a season's hard work under the direction of fine coaches. The schools are ready for their big rivalry, and we the spectators are now ready to sit back and watch The Game: North vs. South.
